
USICA
VISIT ELEMARA
STONEHEARTH
HEART OF THE MOUNTAINS

Stonehearth

Nestled where mountain and sea meet, Stonehearth has welcomed travelers for generations. Carved into living granite above a magnificent fjord, the dwarven capital is renowned for its towering halls, legendary

Explore the Heart of the Mountains, where every stone

Every visitor is welcomed as a guest.

Why Visit Stonehearth?

Stonehearth offers visitors an unforgettable combination of breathtaking scenery, timeless craftsmanship, and genuine dwarven hospitality. Whether exploring its bustling streets, marveling at monumental architecture, or sharing a meal in a traditional mead hall, every visit reveals a culture shaped by generations of faithful stewardship.

Explore a City Carved from the Mountain

Much of Stonehearth lies within the mountain itself. Grand halls, workshops, homes, and public spaces have been carved directly into the living granite, creating one of the most remarkable cities on Elemara.

Witness Legendary Craftsmanship

From master blacksmiths and stone carvers to skilled shipbuilders, Stonehearth's artisans are renowned throughout Elemara for producing work of exceptional quality and enduring beauty.

Experience Dwarven Hospitality

Visitors are welcomed not merely as customers, but as honored guests. Shar-

Traveler's Tip

Stonehearth is best explored on foot. Comfortable footwear is recommended, as many streets, terraces, and stairways follow the natural slopes of the mountain.

The Living Mountain

Stonehearth was not built around the mountain—it was carved into it. While visitors first notice the terraces, waterfalls, and towering halls that climb the cliffs, much of the city extends deep beneath the surface. Homes, workshops, storehouses, public halls, and miles of passageways have been carefully shaped from living granite over countless generations.

Every addition to the city reflects the dwarven belief that good craftsmanship should serve both the present and the generations yet to come. Stonehearth continues to grow, not outward across

Did You Know?

Many first-time visitors are surprised to learn that the visible city is only a fraction of Stonehearth. Extensive residential districts, workshops, and public spaces lie beneath the mountain, connected

The Temple of Thremble

Rising above Stonehearth, the Temple of Thremble is one of Elemara's most recognizable landmarks. Visitors are welcome to admire its craftsmanship while respectfully observing this active place of worship.

Visitor Etiquette

Speak quietly inside the temple.

Visitors are welcome in most public areas unless otherwise indicated.

The King's Mead Hall

The King's Mead Hall has welcomed travelers and citizens for generations. Meals are shared, stories exchanged, and friendships strengthened beneath soaring dragon-carved beams.

Guests are welcome during public meals, where Stonehearth's famous hospitality is experienced around the table.

Visitor Tip

Guests are welcome during public meals. Seating is communal, and visitors are encouraged to accept invitations to join a table.

Did you Know?

Mead Halls are communiy centers as well as dinning halls.

Master Craftsmen

For generations, the craftsmen of Stonehearth have earned a reputation for excellence throughout Elemara. From blacksmiths and shipwrights to stone carvers and jewelers, dwarven artisans are known for creating work that is both beautiful and built to endure.

Did You Know?

Every apprentice trains under a master craftsman before practicing independently. Many workshops have remained in the same family for generations.

Visitor Tip

Many workshops welcome visitors.

Life Beneath the Mountain

Much of Stonehearth lies beyond the view of visitors. Beneath the mountain, broad streets connect homes, workshops, marketplaces, and gathering halls carved directly into living granite. Warm lantern light, flowing water, and careful stonework create neighborhoods that have served dwarven families for countless generations.

Though hidden from the surface, these underground districts are every bit as vibrant as the terraces overlooking the fjord.

Did You Know?

Stonehearth has expanded inward for more than a thousand years. Many homes remain occupied by the same extended families for generations.

The Harbor District

Stonehearth's harbor has connected the Kingdom to the wider world for centuries. Merchant vessels, fishing boats, and graceful dwarven longships depart daily for ports across the Northern and Western Seas. Here, visitors can watch shipwrights at work, browse the bustling waterfront markets, or simply enjoy the view across one of Elemara's most beautiful fjords.

Did You Know?

Stonehearth's longships are prized throughout Elemara for their craftsmanship, seaworthiness, and ability to navigate both open seas and narrow fjords.

The Fjord of Stonehearth

Did You Know?

The fjord surrounding Stonehearth provides a sheltered harbor throughout the year and has shaped the kingdom's trade and maritime traditions for centuries.

Visitor Tip

Walking trails along the cliffs offer spectacular views of the city, harbor, and surrounding mountains. Morning and evening provide the clearest views across the fjord.

Quick Facts

Population	Approximately 25,000 residents.
Climate	Cool summers, snowy winters.
Primary Language	Dwarven (Common widely understood.)
Currency E	lemaran Crown.
Travel Time	Approximately one day from Grayhaven by road.
Best Season	Late spring through early autumn.

Getting Around

Visitors will find Stonehearth easy to explore on foot. Broad stone stairways and gently graded streets connect the harbor, terraces, and public districts. Guided tours of selected underground neighborhoods are also available.

Local Customs

Hospitality is highly valued.
Remove muddy boots before entering private homes.
Respect places of worship.
Ask before entering workshops.
Accepting food or drink is considered polite.

Did You Know?

Many visitors are surprised to discover that Stonehearth

A Day in Stonehearth

Morning

Begin your visit at the Harbor District, where longships arrive with the morning tide and merchants prepare for another day of trade. Wander the waterfront before climbing the terraces toward the city's upper districts.

Midday

Visit the Temple of Thremble and admire one of Elemara's finest examples of dwarven architecture. Nearby workshops offer opportunities to watch master craftsmen at work.

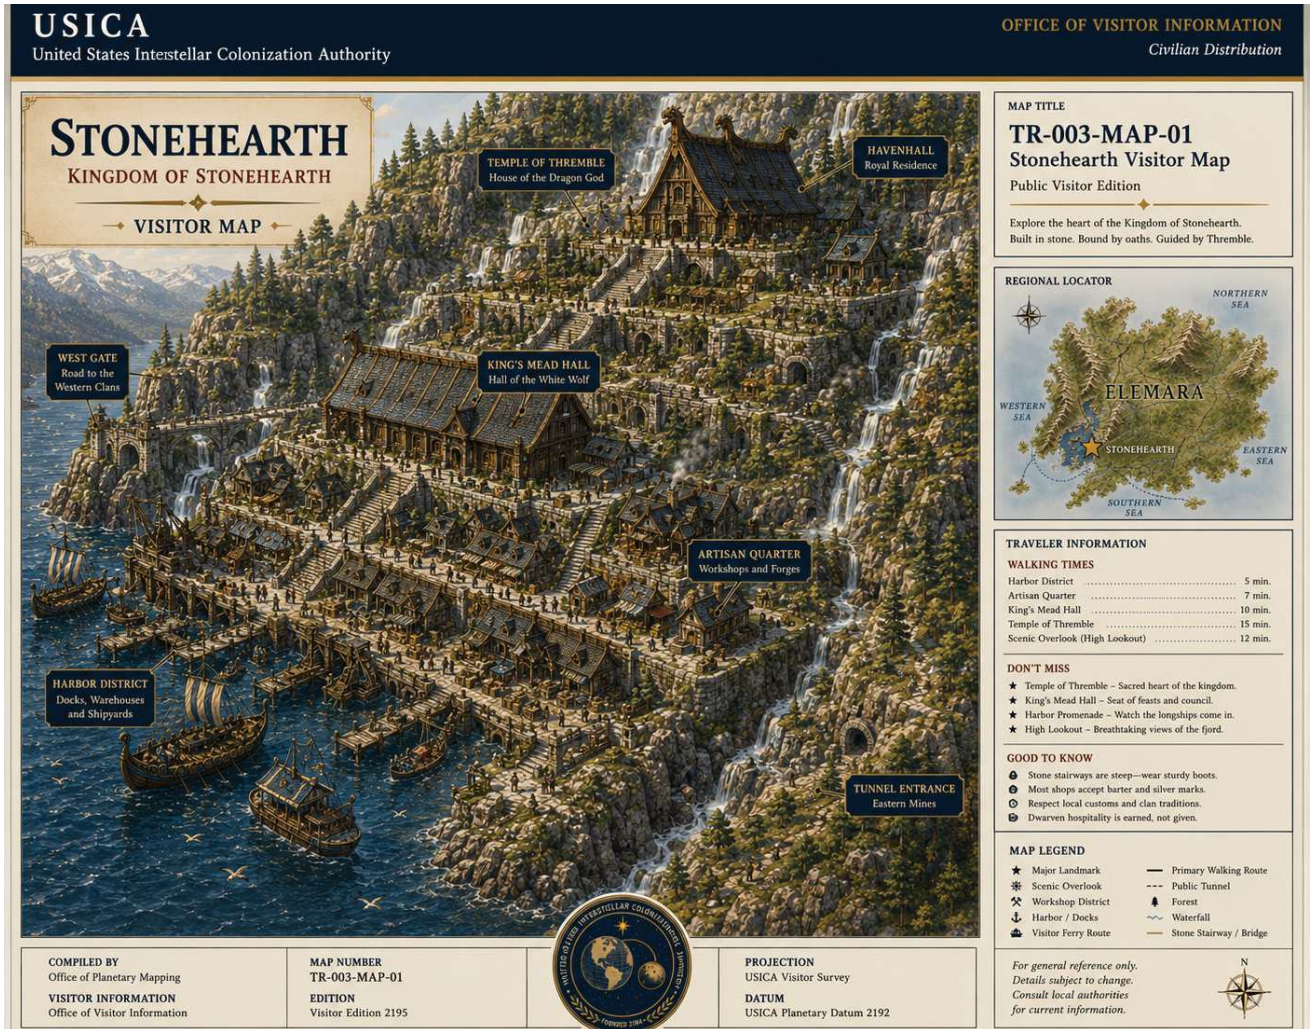

Afternoon

Explore the Living Mountain through its public streets and underground districts before enjoying a traditional meal in one of Stonehearth's famous mead halls.

Evening

Return to the waterfront or a cliffside overlook as the setting sun paints the granite cliffs in warm gold and the harbor slowly grows quiet.

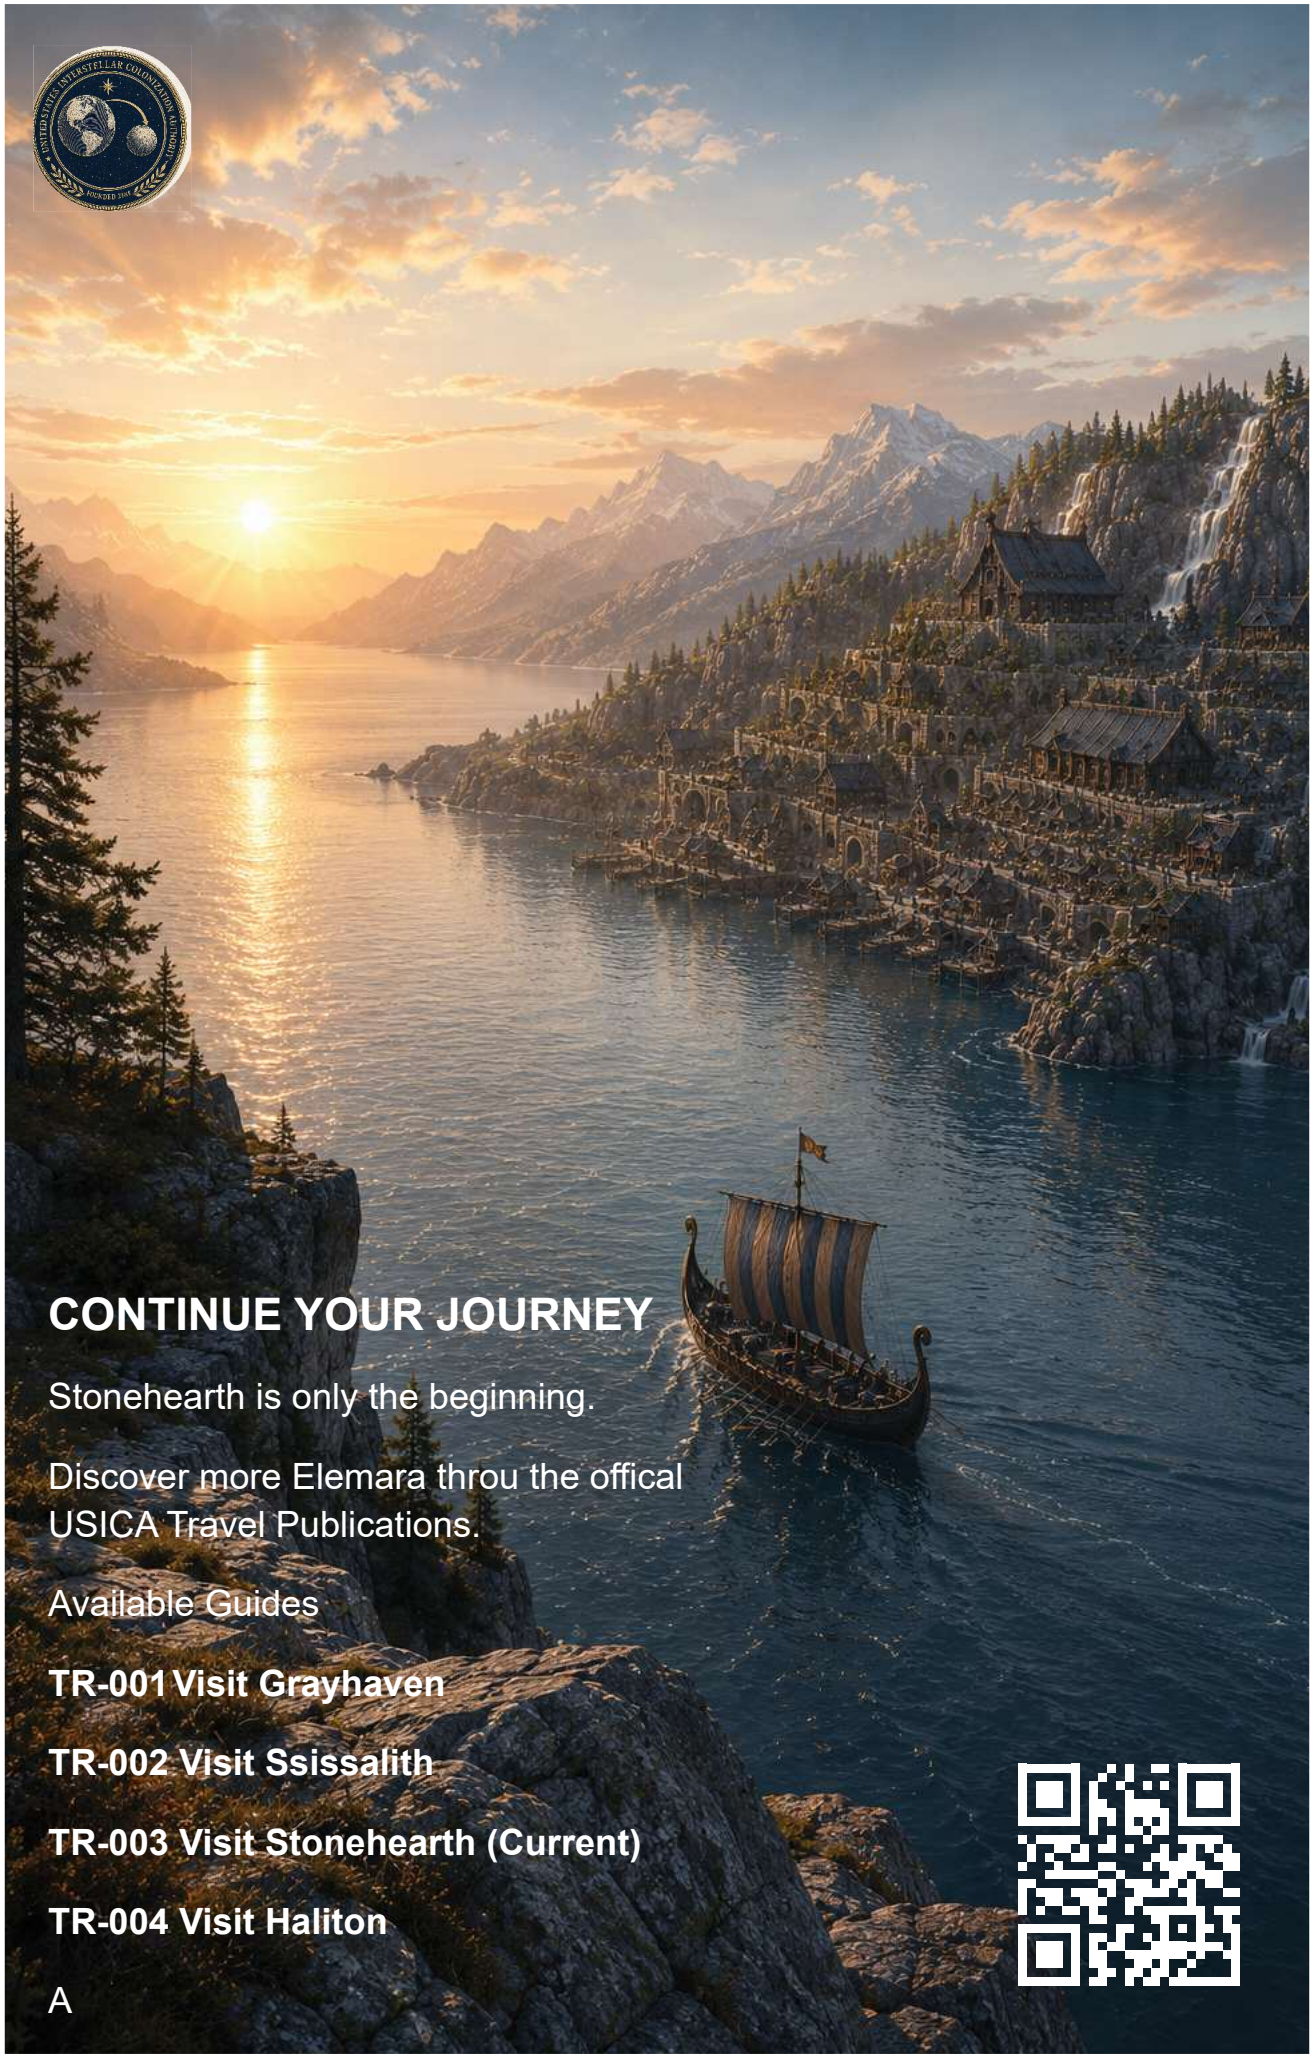

TRAVELER INFORMATION

Walk Times

From the Harbor District

Temple of Thremble ..... 15 min.
King's Mead Hall ..... 10 min.
Artisan Quarter ..... 7 min.
Market Square ..... 5 min.
Cliffside Overlook ..... 20 min.

CONTINUE YOUR JOURNEY

Stonehearth is only the beginning.

Discover more Elemara throu the offical USICA Travel Publications.

Available Guides

TR-001 Visit Grayhaven

TR-002 Visit Ssissalith

TR-003 Visit Stonehearth (Current)

TR-004 Visit Haliton

A