
VISIT
HALITON
CITY OF ORDER. STRENGTH. PURPOSE.
UNITED STATES INTERSTELLAR COLONIZATION AUTHORITY
FOUNDED 2184
DISCOVER THE HEART OF ELEMARA
WHERE CIVILIZATION STANDS STRONG

Welcome to Haliton

Haliton is the ancient heart of troll civilization. Visitors expecting only soldiers will instead discover broad avenues, bustling markets, monumental public buildings, and one of Elemara's oldest centers of government. From its gleaming civic monuments to the great fortress overlooking the city, Haliton reflects a culture that values order, discipline, and purpose above all else.

Visitor Tip

Most residents move with clear purpose. Standing in the middle of busy avenues or blocking public walkways is considered discourteous. If you are uncertain where to go, simply step aside and observe before continuing.

Why Visit Haliton?

- Monumental white marble architecture
- Ancient civic traditions
- Remarkable public buildings
- Thriving markets
- One of Elemara's oldest continuous cities
- Unique troll culture
- Historic city walls and fortress
- Guided government district tours

Welcome to Haliton

Haliton is the ancient heart of troll civilization and one of Elemara's great centers of government. Monumental public buildings, lively markets, and orderly streets climb toward the great fortress overlooking the city. Visitors who take time to explore will discover a culture built upon order, discipline, and civic purpose.

Visitor Etiquette

Walk with purpose.

Yield to official couriers.

Do not block public walkways.

Government buildings are open only for official business.

Respect local customs and public ceremonies.

Why Visit Haliton?

A City of Order

Haliton is one of Elemara's most orderly cities, where government, commerce, and daily life move with quiet purpose.

Monumental Architecture

White marble civic buildings rise above neighborhoods of cream-colored stone homes, reflecting centuries of careful planning.

Everyday Life

Markets bustle as merchants, craftsmen, and families go about their day.

Meet the Trolls

To many visitors, trolls are an unexpected surprise. Although physically imposing, they are a highly organized people whose society values order, duty, craftsmanship, and civic responsibility. Daily life revolves around work, family, and service to the community.

Many first-time visitors quickly discover that trolls are less interested in conversation than in completing the task before them. Courtesy is shown through competence and reliability rather than elaborate manners.

Quick Facts

Four-armed humanoids

Average height: 7–8 feet

Native language: Trollish

Visitors should hire an interpreter

Known for administration, engineering, and public works

A Walk Through the Capital

Haliton is best explored on foot. Broad avenues connect public squares, markets, temples, and government districts. Nearly every street eventually leads toward the city's central fortress, making it difficult to become completely lost.

The city rewards unhurried exploration. Around nearly every corner visitors will find fountains, neighborhood markets, quiet courtyards, and examples of the remarkable civic architecture that has defined Haliton for centuries.

Visitor Tips

Wear comfortable walking shoes.

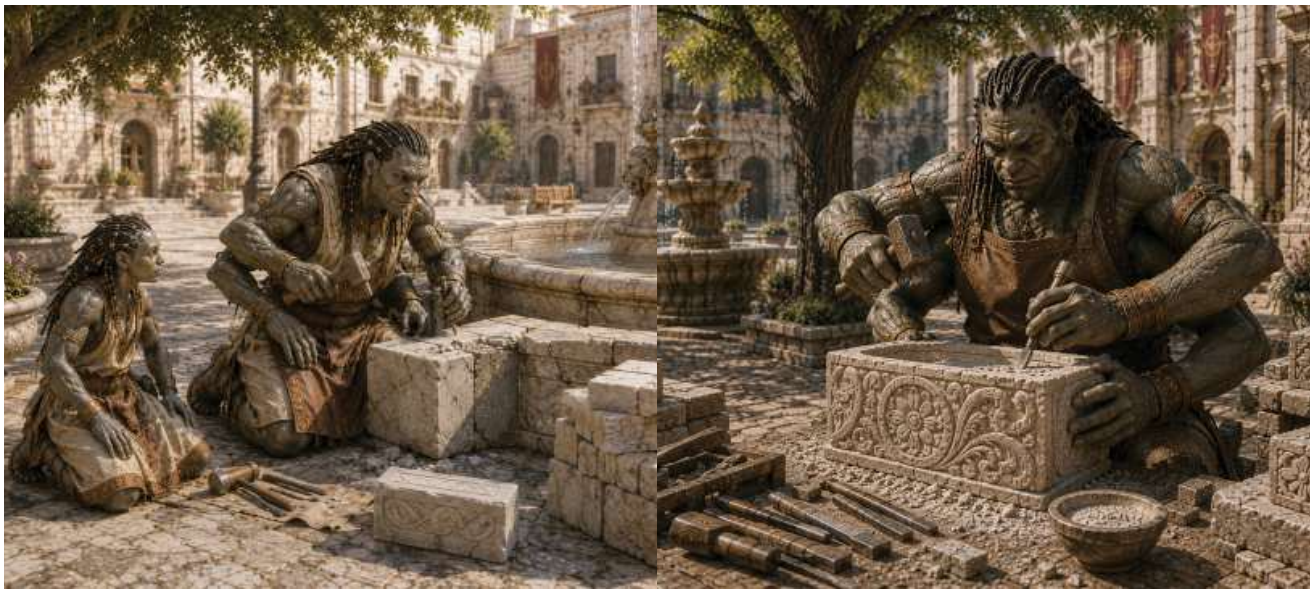

Public fountains provide drinking water.Government couriers always have the right of way.

Morning and late afternoon are ideal for sightseeing.

A Civilization of Builders

Haliton reflects generations of careful planning. Public buildings, fountains, plazas, and roads are constructed to serve the city for centuries rather than decades. Visitors will notice that even neighborhood streets are well maintained and thoughtfully designed.

For the trolls, building well is a form of civic pride. Each generation preserves what came before while adding something of its own for those who will follow.

Did You Know?

Many of Haliton's oldest public buildings have served the same purpose for generations. Visitors often find that the city's greatest landmarks remain centers of everyday life rather than historical monuments.

The Hands That Built Haliton

Troll craftsmen are respected throughout Elemara for their patience and attention to detail. Stone, metal, leather, and wood are shaped with the expectation that each piece will serve for generations. Visitors will find workshops throughout the city where artisans continue traditions handed down for centuries.

Popular Purchases

Hand-carved stoneware

Decorative pottery

Bronze household goods

Leather satchels

Carved writing boxes

A Meal Worth Sharing

Meals in Haliton emphasize fresh ingredients, generous portions, and simple preparation. Bread, vegetables, fruit, roasted meats, cheeses, and hearty stews appear throughout the city. Travelers will find that meals are unhurried and often shared among family and friends.

Although recipes vary from district to district, visitors can expect food that is filling, practical, and prepared with care.

Local Favorites

Fresh baked flatbread
Herb-roasted vegetables
Stone-baked meats
Seasonal fruit
Hard cheeses
Honey pastries